

78 years, the conflict between Israel and Palestine.

For 78 years, the conflict between Israel and Palestine has defied resolution by global leaders, UN envoys, and religious figures alike, tragically passing the burden to new generations. The historical assassination of a Nobel Peace Prize laureate by religious extremists underscored a critical vulnerability in traditional peace processes

✓ The Multi-Religion Election System (MRES) provides this missing structural architecture. Inspired by Nordic democratic practices, MRES proposes the creation of a dedicated, non-partisan Faith Representatives Chamber (FRC). This framework structurally separates religious extremism from secular political leverage while guaranteeing equitable, democratic representation for all recognized faith communities. This guide offers policymakers, NGOs, and peacebuilders a scalable blueprint to finally break the 78-year deadlock and foster long-term, institutionalized peace.
